Dear [Redacted]

(b)(3) CIAAct
(b)(6)

April 15, 2010

Thank you and your staff for your letter of April 13, 2010, containing the redactions you propose to my manuscript, Victims of Delusion.

Attached please find my revised manuscript, in which I have incorporated all the redactions you propose, without exception, without addition anywhere in the text, and without change. The manuscript now conforms exactly to the version you sent me in your April 13, 2010 communication.

Note, however, that the pagination has changed. I include here the page numbers in the version you returned to me where I have made all the changes you propose, and the new page numbers. The page numbers have changed due to my incorporating your proposed redactions, because I have eliminated all notes, and because I reversed the order of two chapters—but I have not/not added or amended any text to the manuscript, except in direct response to your proposed redactions. The only addition I have made is to replace the [REDACTED] (b)(3) NatSecAct (b)(5)

[REDACTED] The manuscript is otherwise unchanged, without additions.

Specifically, I have made the following changes:

(b)(3) NatSecAct (b)(5) [REDACTED] I have clarified now the [REDACTED] in the version I am now submitting to you. Your comment pertains to only three passages which were “new” text in the version I submitted on March 16. All other “note” passages had been resolved between us in previous versions of the text. I shortened these “new” passages by a few words, but have not added any text anywhere. These notes passages now read as follows:

[REDACTED] (b)(3) NatSecAct (b)(5)

This passage comments on the redacted paragraph immediately preceding it.

Again, this passage does not specify what was in the redacted passage that preceded it. The

These are all the changes made to the text. I have also eliminated any variations in font and color, or internal notes—either to myself or to you. It is otherwise identical to the agreed-upon text of the March 16 version. It is now a finished, agreed-upon text, which incorporates all the changes you want, verbatim and redacted as you requested.

With these changes incorporated, we are now in complete agreement concerning the text of the manuscript, and have concluded our work together. Please send me your note confirming that we have agreed upon the text. I will send you the “galleys” of my manuscript for your review, should I find a publisher.

Sincerely,

Glenn L. Carle
